ARS in 2010 ? what is new?

The Nordplus Application and Report System (ARS) has been improved and further developed in accordance with feedback from applicants in the previous application round. The effect of this work is a more user-friendly ARS in 2010.

Most of the changes are "invisible" changes making the system smoother for the applicant, but a few of the changes are important for the applicant to notice:

A Scandinavian language version

When you start an application, you can now choose between an English or a Norwegian version of the application- and report forms. The user guide for ARS and e-mail texts have also been translated to Norwegian.

Re-set your password

The users have now the opportunity to re-set their own password. This may come in handy if for instance the coordinator changes in the running of a project.

Choose more than one priority

You have now the possibility to choose two or more priorities, if relevant for your application. Please make sure that the priorities are reflected in the application itself.
